CALL TO PRAYER AS WE SEEK A NEW BISHOP TO LEAD US

July is a notable month, as Bishop Tim moves to take up his new role at Lambeth Palace and the Bishop's crosier, or staff, is returned to the Dean of Truro for safekeeping until a successor is appointed.

As you can imagine, this is no ordinary round of recruitment for the diocese.

A lot of the work in the early days will fall to the Vacancy in See Committee which, chaired by Bishop Chris, includes both Archdeacons, our General Synod representatives, the Dean of Truro and both clergy and lay members of our Diocesan Synod. They will, of course, be assisted and supported by the Diocesan Secretary, Esther Pollard, and other members of the Church House secretariat. The role of this group is to set out the needs of the diocese and also to elect six representatives to the Crown Nominations Commission.

But the story doesn't end there. There is also involvement from six central members of the Commission elected by the General Synod, the two Archbishops and the Prime Minister's and Archbishops' Secretaries for Appointments, Edward Chaplin and Caroline Boddington. Our six representatives will travel to Lambeth Palace to finalise the shortlisting and interview process with these other members of the committee.

There will also be an element of public consultation during the process and opportunities for both members of the church and the public to have their say over what they feel is crucial in our new Bishop. Edward and Caroline will visit the diocese in the New Year to conduct their own listening exercise.

The Crown Nominations Commission will meet in May and June next year. This means we have time to prayerfully reflect on our Christian life together and to consider the next stages of our journey in Christ and the nature of the Bishop we are seeking to lead us in this.

Bishop Chris said: "While we are clearly all deeply sorry to see Bishop Tim leave us, it is a unique privilege and a responsibility for members of the Vacancy in See Committee to contribute to the process of identifying a new Bishop of Truro – and I am confident that, by approaching this with a heart to listen, a commitment to prayer and minds open to the discernment of the Holy Spirit, we will rise to that.

"It is also important for people to know that, as the Anglican Church in Cornwall, the Isles of Scilly and two Devon parishes, we will not simply stand still between now and the arrival of our new diocesan bishop. We have a lot of exciting things planned for the next year as we continue to live out our confidence in the gospel in our shared mission and purpose to discover God's kingdom and grow the church."

PLEDGE 5 - CLIMATE VISION

PLEDGE FIVE: I have pledged to walk, cycle, use public transport or register with www.carsharecornwall.com 08700 111199 to travel to work or a regular journey at least once a week.

We are half way through our pledges – well done everyone! If you have not taken part yet, please do join in, they are all easy to do and can be done in a week, Bishop Tim, Archdeacon Bill and Rev Steve Wild all did two a month for five months – but please do join us now.

Most of us travel every day, be it a walk to the shops or a drive to work, but now it is time to think about how we might do that in a better way and save carbon. It is crucial we cut carbon urgently from today. If you are walking, then great, the health benefits of that regular journey are significant. If you are driving and already rolling your eyes at the thought of public transport or car sharing in Cornwall – think on, when we launched this pledge someone living in Looe found a ride to her workplace in Hayle! Please do at least give it a try.

How do we travel? Is our journey like that of the Wise Men – vital and earth changing – or just a habit, and a waste of energy? Could we achieve the same ends in a better way?

BISHOP'S LETTER

“ Thank you for the extraordinary witness of thousands of Christians right across the diocese. A witness you have demonstrated so very clearly to me ever since I arrived as your Bishop. I have enjoyed enormously my time here and I am sorry to be saying goodbye. ”

THE RT REVD TIM THORNTON
BISHOP OF TRURO

I have said to many people over the past few weeks that I am in denial as I don't really want to consider the reality of leaving. Yet of course I am moving on to a new role and so I do want to say something as I leave. I want to say thank you!

As you know, we have chosen to make prayer a priority in this diocese, and goodness does our world need prayer now more than ever, or so it seems. Tragically our news channels have been, and continue to be, full of dreadful horrors around the world and for the past few weeks and months, very much here in our own country, which makes you stop and think. We have a huge amount about which to pray.

It is right and proper that we as Christians should make a priority of prayer. It should go without saying, which is why it is important to say it.

There are of course many different ways of praying and much to consider when we do pray. We need to go on learning about prayer and experiencing different forms and traditions of prayer so that we are stretched and developed in our own discipleship.

As I begin to consider seriously leaving the diocese, I want to say thank you for the wonderful gifts you give me, day by day. The marvellous smiles I receive from you, the wonderful words of encouragement I get daily, the work and witness of so many people right across the diocese who are clearly committed to living out their response to the love of God day by day.

When we pray, when you pray, please make sure you say thank you as there is so much to give thanks for.

Thank you Diocese of Truro and I thank God for you. The best gift you could ever give to me would be to go on thanking God and remembering we are loved children of God with so much for which we can say thanks be to God.

MISSION CASE STUDY

READER COMBINES CHURCH VOLUNTEERING WITH POLITICS

Combining a busy role as a Reader with a high-profile position at Cornwall Council is not for everyone but Ann Kerridge makes it look easy as she talks about the importance of the roles and how they can complement each other.

Arriving in Cornwall in 1976, Ann settled in the Bodmin area and has been attending Cardynham Church ever since. It was while she was a churchwarden that the church became in transition and Ann found herself taking some of the services. To her surprise, she realised she enjoyed this aspect of the service so she made the decision to train to be a Reader. She completed her training and was licensed by the Bishop in 2003. On average, she takes three services a month: a morning prayer service at Cardynham, a traditional Book of Common Prayer matins at St Hydroc's, Lanhydrock, and Cafe Church at Cardynham.

It was around a similar time (the year she turned 50) that her involvement with the council began. Having previously worked as a librarian and then as a manager of the Citizens Advice Bureau, Ann said: "It was time to move on and do something different – so I decided to stand as a councillor."

Ann was elected as a district councillor for Cornwall in 2003 and became a county councillor in 2005. She played a large role in the implementation authority team who set up the unitary authority in 2009. She eventually became vice-chairman of the council in 2013 and then chairman in 2015.

Although her two years as chairman ended in May, she clearly relished being in the role, explaining that it was important to not be too political.

"What you need is a good working relationship with all the leaders in the council and that just wouldn't work if you were too controversial in your views."

The role of chairman is varied and includes chairing eight full council meetings each year and working with the 123 councillors in Cornwall. During her time at the council she has led the Cornwall Pride March in Truro, presented D-Day veterans with the Legion of Honour Medal, presented the Cornwall Civic Award, celebrated the Cornwall Rugby Team's victory at Twickenham, attended the British Empire Medal presentations with the Lord Lieutenant, awarded the Queen's Awards for Voluntary Service and visited numerous local events and festivals around the county.

ALL WELCOME TO JOURNEY WITH US FOR DAY OF PRAYER

There will be a Day of Prayer in Truro Cathedral on Saturday, July 22, when we hope that people from across the diocese will come together to pray, and build on the priority that we have set for prayer.

Everybody is invited to the event, called The Journey.

It will begin at 10am and close with an act of worship at 2pm, and people are invited to come for all or part of the event. There will be prayer stations and plenty of space to pray in the Cathedral.

Bishop Tim said: "I am very grateful to all who have worked so hard to prepare for this. I encourage you to come and spend some time praying for the diocese, for the mission of our churches and for the coming of God's Kingdom."

FROM ZENNOR CHURCH TO PARIS FASHION RUNWAY

When, or if, you think of the absolutely fabulous fashion house Alexander McQueen, handcrafted kneelers in Zennor Church, deep down in Cornwall's south west, probably don't spring to mind. But they should.

Sarah Burton, the head designer of Alexander McQueen, who took over after his tragic death in 2010, triumphed at her recent Autumn 2017 show in Paris with gorgeously rich, beautifully embellished dresses that both floated and yet were rooted in the centuries old tradition of tapestry kneelers. They were modelled on tapestry kneelers that Sarah Burton discovered when she went with her design team to Cornwall and met up with Revd Elizabeth Foot, priest-in-charge at Zennor.

EXPLORE YOUR VOCATION WITH US

“ Have you ever sensed that God has a purpose for you and for your life? ”

REVD CANON JANE VAUGHAN-WILSON DIOCESAN DIRECTOR OF ORDINANDS & BISHOP'S
ADVISER IN PASTORAL CARE & COUNSELLING

As you're reading this newsletter, the chances are that you consider yourself to be a servant of God. But it is also really important for each of us to consider ways in which we can serve our brothers and sisters. This helps us not only in our mission to discover God's kingdom and grow the church, but also serves to enrich all of our lives.

As Director of Ordinands, I am used to having conversations with people of all ages about whether ordination might be the right thing for them. But while I am always only too pleased to hear from someone who is thinking about ordination, it's really important to say right from the start that there are many other kinds of vocation.

It might be helping a child to read at school, it could be becoming a Lay Reader. It may be that you are called to serve as a Local Pastoral Minister, Lay Worship Leader, or to become a teacher or school governor, or being called to help in youth work – from teenagers to toddlers in Messy Church. You may feel that you have other professional or life-skills that you would like to offer the church, to be deployed in ways you haven't really considered. The possibilities are endless.

If you feel that God is calling you to serve, whether that is about giving a few hours a month or devoting a large part of your life to His work, I would like to invite you to join us in Truro Cathedral on Saturday, July 8.

We will be there with the express purpose of exploring different kinds of vocation, and hearing from people including Bishop Chris and Revd Jeremy Putnam about their own vocations. We will look at some of the possibilities for ourselves and what we can offer people, and how we can encourage others to be receptive to the call when it comes.

The day begins with prayer at 10am and continues until 3pm, with various speakers, discussion groups, a panel discussion, exercises to help people identify their specific vocation, and stalls on different types of vocation throughout the day. Some may choose to come for the entire programme, while others might want to drop in for half an hour at some point – and all will be welcomed.

It is fine for people to turn up on the day – there will be lots of friendly faces from the diocese ready to say hello. If you want to talk to somebody before then, please call our communications department on 01726 829198 and they will arrange for somebody to call you back depending on the kind of vocation you would like to explore.

I look forward to seeing you there.
